MONETARY POLICY

Short-term proinflationary risks have abated compared to March

Inflation and inflation expectations

- Annual inflation slowdown is continuing. CPI declined in May to 5.1% YoY and stood at 5.0% YoY as of 10 June.
- Starting in February, MoM SA consumer price growth has remained close to 4% (annualised).
- In May, households' and business inflation expectations did not materially change and remain elevated.
- The Bank of Russia has lowered its end-of-year annual inflation forecast for 2019 from 4.7-5.2% to 4.2-4.7%.
- The revised forecast takes into account the completion of the VAT increase pass-through to prices (including the influence of secondary effects) and the preservation of relatively favourable external conditions and moderate dynamics of domestic demand.
- Moving on, according to the Bank of Russia's forecast, annual inflation will stay close to 4%.

Monetary conditions:

- Monetary conditions have somewhat eased since the last Board meeting.
- OFZ yields and deposit rates have declined. The potential for lending rates growth has mostly exhausted.
- The Bank of Russia's decision to cut the key rate and the year-to-date decline in OFZ yields create conditions for the decline of deposit and lending rates in the future.

Economic activity

- Economic growth in 1H 2019 is lower than the Bank of Russia's expectations.
- During the first four months of 2019, the growth in general government income outperformed the growth in expenses, which, in part, is due to the shift to 2H 2019 of the implementation of a number of national projects.
- Taking into account GDP growth statistics for 2018 — 2019 Q1 published by Rosstat, the Bank of Russia lowered its GDP growth forecast for 2019 from 1.2-1.7% to 1.0-1.5%.

Internal risks

- The effects of the VAT hike have fully materialised (↓)
- Elevated and unanchored inflation expectations
- Medium-term fiscal policy parameters

Moderate risks — estimates are mostly unchanged:

- Wage movements
- Prices of individual food products
- Possible changes in consumer behavior

External risks

- Risks of persistent capital outflows from emerging markets (↓)
- Slowdown in global economic growth
- Geopolitical factors
- The volatility of global oil prices

Decision

as of June 14, 2019

The Bank of Russia cuts the key rate by 25 bp to 7.50% p.a.

Signal

"...If the situation develops in line with the baseline forecast, the Bank of Russia admits the possibility of further key rate reduction at one of the upcoming Board of Directors' meetings and a transition to neutral monetary policy until mid-2020.

In its key rate decision-making, the Bank of Russia will take into account actual and expected inflation dynamics relative to the target and economic developments over the forecast horizon, as well as risks posed by domestic and external conditions and the reaction of financial markets..."

- Higher capital adequacy requirements
- Advanced risk management approach

On 1 June 2017, Federal Law No. 92-FZ dated 1 May 2017 came into force. It envisages the introduction of proportional regulation designed to set up a regulatory balance for banks differing in scale and in the nature of operations. 149 banks hold basic license, as of December 2018.

FINANCIAL STABILITY

Macroprudential policy aimed at Identifying and preventing potential systemic risks

Credit activity

As the pace of recovery remains inconsistent across lending segments in Russia, credit-to-GDP gap for both corporate and retail lending (a difference between the actual credit-to-GDP ratio adjusted to currency revaluation, and the long-run trend) is still estimated as negative. This shows that lending remains below the long-term trend.

Retail lending risks

Unsecured consumer lending continued to grow at a high pace. Outstanding loans increased 25.3% in year-on-year terms in April 2019 to the amount of RUB 7.9tn. The Bank of Russia's Board of Directors has decided to increase add-ons to the risk weights for unsecured consumer loans bearing an effective interest rate of 10-30% by 30bps for loans extended from 1 April 2019.

Mortgage loans grow at a steady rate, however, borrowers' debt burden remaining at the same level shows that the current growth does not present any significant risk to the financial stability. The Bank of Russia aims to prevent the build-up of risks related to loans with a high loan-to-value ratio, thus the risk weights for such loans issued after 1 January 2019 were raised from 150% to 200%. These measures are aimed at sustainable development of the mortgage lending segment.

Capital adequacy

The capital adequacy (Basel III N1.0 ratio) for the banking sector remains at comfortable level of 12.1% as of 1 May, 2019.

Rising risk weights for specific credit requirements results in banks increasing their capital reserves to cover potential losses. Therefore considering the uneven recovery of lending, there is no need for a positive countercyclical buffer for credit institutions yet.

Decision

The Bank of Russia's Board of Directors has decided to keep the countercyclical capital buffer (CCB) rate for Russian credit institutions at 0% of risk weighted assets
